

EMP 325W: Public and Environmental Health Policy

This interdisciplinary policy course examines the prevention and management of threats to human health caused by interacting environmental conditions and social forces. Major topics in this course include air and water pollution control, toxic substances control, climate change and environmental health, disease control, pandemics, public health emergency management, and public health leadership. This course covers public and environmental health policies at the community, national, and international levels.

This course satisfies the advanced writing skills course requirement.

Units: 3

Prerequisites:

WRIT 101

Program: Environmental Management and Policy