

ECON 301: Microeconomics

This course examines the modern theories of the market system, demand and production, and the interactions between consumers and firms under various market conditions. Students learn how market forces determine prices, resource allocation, and income distribution. Students are also introduced to public policy evaluation and welfare economics.

Units: 3

Prerequisites:

ECON 100/INTS 100.

Program: Economics